\\n\\n\\n\\n Mooody's: The Depletion of Mandatory Reserves Exposes Lebanese Banks to Danger
Mooody's, the credit rating agency, has warned that the inability of the Central Bank of Lebanon to provide money for the government program to support imports, and the depletion of mandatory foreign exchange reserves held on behalf of commercial banks, represents a complete collapse of the banking sector.
\\nAccording to a report issued by the agency, the encroachment on the mandatory reserves of banks maintained in the Central Bank of Lebanon, amidst the continuing government stalemate, would increase the risks of international correspondent banks, which could endanger banking transactions in Lebanese banks, which could have a negative impact on the main pillars of the economy, including trade, tourism, and remittances.
\\nDealings between commercial banks and the central bank are based on compliance with regulations, including compliance with global anti-money laundering regulations in addition to financial stability requirements. Financial stability requirements include avoiding the equivalent of 15 percent of total foreign deposits, due to the high rates of "dollarization" in the Lebanese economy, which have exceeded 80 percent since last June.

High Influx of Foreign Direct Investment into Jordan

The value of foreign direct investments flowing into the Jordanian market increased by 1.9 percent during the past 2020 year, compared to 2019, despite the restrictions imposed by the Coronavirus pandemic, and the decline in the volume of investments globally.

According to figures issued by the Central Bank of Jordan, the value of inbound foreign direct investments amounted to 496.7 million dinars (700.3 million dollars). While the value of foreign direct investment amounted to 487.3 million dinars (687 million dollars) in 2019.

The data of the Central Bank of Jordan did not show the sectors in which the foreign direct investment coming to the Kingdom were distributed.

The foreign investment, achieved the highest amount in 2008, reaching the level of two billion dinars (2.82 billion dollars), but it retreated with the repercussions of the global financial crisis. Noting that foreign investment constitutes one of the important data included in the current account of the balance of payments in foreign exchange, along with tourism, the trade balance and remittances of expatriates.
